Graham Boyd

Developing Renewable Energy Systems

GRAHAM BOYD has lived and worked in six different cultures over the past 20 years, including South Africa, Germany, Italy, Japan, Belgium and China. More than anything else this has taught him how similar we all are. Now in TetraLD, he is enjoying combining his experience of people, science and business to develop individuals, teams and new businesses. Recently he has given cross-cultural trainings within P&G, building on his experience working and living in Asia, Europe and Africa. He also initiated quality control training in P&G, giving this 3 times a year for the past 8 years

Mark Henderson

Creating Autonomous housing communities using renewable energy

MARK HENDERSON - Following studies in his native Scotland and in Switzerland and careers in retail jewellery and marketing consultancy, Mark spotted a business idea that appealed to his values, his passion and his entrepreneurial streak. In 2004, spending time in Sweden, where his wife is from, he discovered just how mainstream renewable energy and heat pumps, in particular, had become and recognized that the UK was going to have to make the transition away from fossil fuels. The idea behind Ecoliving was born and Mark has spent the last 4 years selling his idea and in the process, building a £5M company.
